This was about the condition of things which Gen. Peirpoint found existing at the time of his arrival.

The prisoners had heard of his arrival in the city, and were overjoyed at the prospect of meeting a friend direct from their State, and upon whom they felt they could rely for all the aid he could possibly render them. The interview between him and these men was a very affecting one. Many of them shed tears, and the General says that it is impossible for him to describe this own feelings when he witnessed the manifestations of joy and hope with which they greeted him.

This distressing affection—which renders life and marriage impossible—is the penalty paid by the victims of improper indulgences. Young persons are too apt to commit excesses from not being aware of the dreaging consequences that may ensue. Now, who that understands the subject will pretend to deny that the power of procreation is lost sconer by those falling into improper habits than by the prudent? Besides being deprived of the pleasure of healthy offspring, the most serious and destructive symptoms to both body and mind arise.
